About This Collection

The gallery titled "open source conference tool" captures developers and creators gathered around laptops in dimly lit co-working spaces, testing platforms like Jitsi Meet, Nextcloud Talk, and Apache OpenMeetings during lockdown. Models wear casual hoodies and glasses, fingers poised over mechanical keyboards, screens glowing with grid views of remote participants. The setting blends home offices with server rack close-ups, rust code snippets visible on secondary monitors. A few sit in bean bags, headsets on, joining BigBlueButton sessions or debugging Linux-based video streams. Some lean back in ergonomic chairs, sipping coffee while reviewing Prompt Mixer interfaces, others adjust virtual backgrounds or mute microphones mid-conversation. View the full gallery above to see how open-source tools power these intimate, tech-driven moments.
